

VISA D APPLICATION – WORK WITH WORK PERMIT

Prior to the visa application, a Belgian work permit needs to be issued to you by the regional authorities in Belgium. The Belgium-based employer, or his representative, has to apply for this work permit. In case the applicant is exempted from the work permit, we need to have written proof of this exemption. The following categories of non-EU citizens still need to apply for a work permit B (or exemption) instead of a single permit:

- third country nationals going to Belgium to work for a period less than 90 days;
- au pairs;
- researchers with hosting agreement (see separate checklist);
- highly qualified staff (European Blue Card);
- employees being transferred within a company (Directive 2014/66/EU of 15.05.2014);
- seasonal workers;
- trainees, only for the Flemish region.
